George Washington was born on February 22, 1732, in Westmoreland County, Virginia. He was the eldest son of Augustine and Mary Ball Washington. His father was a wealthy planter and surveyor, and his mother was a devout Christian.

Washington received a basic education at home, focusing on subjects such as reading, writing, arithmetic, and surveying. He was also an avid reader and spent much of his time studying history, geography, and military strategy.

Military Career

Washington's military career began at the age of 21 when he was appointed as a lieutenant colonel in the Virginia militia. He fought in the French and Indian War (1754-1763), where he learned valuable leadership skills and gained a reputation for courage and determination.

When the American Revolutionary War broke out in 1775, Washington was unanimously chosen as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army. He led the American forces to victory against the British, securing independence for the United States.

Presidency

After the war, Washington was elected as the first president of the United States in 1789. He served two terms, during which he established many of the principles and institutions that govern our country today.

Washington's presidency was marked by his wise leadership, his commitment to the Constitution, and his determination to build a strong and prosperous nation. He established the federal government, created the Supreme Court, and signed the Bill of Rights into law.

Retirement and Legacy

After retiring from public office, Washington returned to his home at Mount Vernon, Virginia. He spent his remaining years farming and managing his estate. He died on December 14, 1799, at the age of 67.

George Washington's legacy is one of courage, leadership, and selfless dedication to his country. He is remembered as the "Father of Our Nation" and his influence continues to shape American society today.
