The novel begins with Xuanzang setting out on his journey from the Chinese capital of Chang'an. He is accompanied by three companions: Sun Wukong, a monkey king; Zhu Bajie, a pig demon; and Sha Wujing, a water buffalo demon. These companions are all former enemies of Xuanzang who have been transformed into his allies.

The journey to India is long and perilous. The travelers must cross mountains, deserts, and oceans. They encounter many dangers along the way, including demons, monsters, and bandits. But with the help of his companions, Xuanzang overcomes all obstacles and reaches his destination.

In India, Xuanzang studies Buddhism under the tutelage of a famous master. He also learns about the history and culture of India. After several years, Xuanzang returns to China with the Buddhist scriptures that he has retrieved. He is greeted as a hero and his journey is celebrated as a triumph of the human spirit.
