A Captivating Narrative

Through the eyes of two Roman children, Quintus and Livia, young readers embark on an immersive journey through a typical day in ancient Rome. They wake up to the morning call of street vendors, navigate the crowded streets, attend school, and partake in the lively festivals and games that shaped Roman life.

Accompanied by vivid illustrations and engaging storytelling, children will:

- Meet a baker preparing delicious loaves of bread at the local bakery.
- Visit a bustling market filled with exotic spices, pottery, and fresh produce.
- Join Roman children at school, learning about literature, history, and mathematics.
- Witness the grandeur of gladiatorial fights at the iconic Colosseum.
- Explore the magnificent baths and temples that were integral to Roman society.

Interactive Learning

Beyond its captivating story, the book incorporates interactive elements to enhance children's learning experience.

- Historical Fun Facts: Scattered throughout the narrative are fascinating tidbits of information that pique children's curiosity.
- Glossary: Unfamiliar terms and names are clearly explained in a glossary at the end of the book.
- Timeline: A visual timeline provides a clear understanding of key events and periods in Roman history.
- Parent/Teacher Guide: A comprehensive guide for parents and teachers includes discussion questions, project ideas, and extension activities.

Benefits for Young Learners

More than just an engaging read, "If We're Kids in Ancient Rome" fosters a deep appreciation for history in young minds. It:

- Expands Knowledge: Children gain a solid understanding of Roman civilization, its culture, and daily life.
- Stimulates Imagination: The immersive narrative encourages children to visualize and connect with the past.
