

The Story of Emily Stowe: A Trailblazing Canadian Physician

Emily Stowe was born in Norwich, Ontario, in 1831. Her father was a doctor, and she grew up watching him care for his patients. She was fascinated by medicine, but at the time, women were not allowed to attend medical school in Canada.

Undeterred, Emily traveled to the United States to study medicine. She graduated from the New York Medical College for Women in 1867, becoming one of the first female physicians in Canada.
