Broadwick's journey into the world of aviation began with her work as a stuntwoman in silent films. She performed daring leaps and falls, earning a reputation for her fearlessness. In 1913, she witnessed her first parachute jump and was instantly captivated by the thrill of it.

The Birth of a Parachuting Legend

Inspired by what she had seen, Broadwick decided to take up parachuting. At the time, the sport was dominated by men, and she faced skepticism and resistance. Undeterred, she trained tirelessly and made her first solo jump in 1914. With each jump, she pushed the boundaries of what was possible.

In 1916, Broadwick made history by setting a world altitude record for parachuting, jumping from a height of 1,200 feet. She continued to break records and became known as the "First Lady of Parachuting." Her daring leaps captured the imagination of the public, making her an aviation icon.
